

THE BRIMMER

BEAT THE HEAT!

JULY 2011

THE PRESIDENT'S MESSAGE

Bail ó Dhia is Mhuire duit,

I hope you all had a festive and enjoyable Fourth of July weekend. Please keep the members of our Armed Services in your prayers as you enjoy the freedoms our country holds so dearly.

The softball team guided by our resolute coach, Timmy Murphy, and our fair-haired General Manager Obie has reached the semi-finals in the AOH league and will take on Division 6 on Sunday, July 10, at Mitchell Playground (poolside field) in Morrell Park (1:30 p.m.). If this message reaches you in time, come on out and cheer on the team!

Also on Sunday, July 10, at 10:30 a.m. Mass, St. Anne's Parish (Lehigh Ave) welcomes all to the installation of their new Pastor, Fr. Edward Brady. Father Brady is the Chaplain of the Irish Famine Memorial and has said the Mass before the Irish Festival for the past several years. He is also Chaplain of the Cavan Society. I would ask that as many of our members attend this Mass as possible. Please wear your AOH golf shirts and t-shirts. There will be a reception in the social hall after Mass.

If you are in the city this summer, drop into Binlids for a few. The club is open Wednesday and Thursday nights, all day Friday and Saturday, plus Sunday afternoons. If you are out and about later on Sunday Afternoons, check out our own DeeJay Tommy Wenger on the wheels of steel at Sweeney's Verree Tavern in Fox Chase. Tommy spins all of our favorite Wildwood classics! On Tuesday nights starting July 19 at Bobby T's in Port Richmond, AOH 61's Raymond Coleman will be performing live acoustic sets from 8 – 10 p.m. Raymond hails from Ardboe, County Tyrone, and is a talent not to be missed.

If you have not been to St. Anne's Novena, you are missing out on a calming, spiritual rejuvenation. This year's Novena starts July 18 and goes to July 26. The services are at 3 and 7 p.m. in the lower (air conditioned) church with the Solemn closing on the 26 at 7 p.m. in the upper church. The guest speaker is Fr. Mike Marrone, school minister at West Catholic. Father Marrone was previously a lay teacher and counselor at North and parochial vicar at St. Denis in Havertown. This is the event our Brother, Kieran McGovern, gets all that miraculous St. Anne's oil from – a favorite of ours at the club.

I hope you all have a safe and enjoyable summer, see youse at Binlids,
In Our Motto,
Jimmy

TUG'S TALKIN' HERE

Some of you took advantage of our "American IDLE" contest. The staff here at Tug's Talking would like to thank the one and only Matty E. for graciously supplying his cell phone number for the contest, of course, he was even more gracious when he found out that someone had inadvertently put his number as the contest line. Due to some last minute ballot stuffing by fans of Pat Dever, he won in a landslide over Bobby "I never saw a comb I didn't like" Murphy.

While always being very objective and fair, I have been approached by Jack "Phil Donohue Look Alike" Cassidy, the President of the Orianna Hill Dog Park, anyway, El Presidente is challenging Pat to another version of "American Idle." So, without further ado, the contest will run from July 12 until August 9. Again, we will use the same random number, 215-519-4449. Same rules apply. Calls are appreciated 24/7. Only five votes during the 24-hour period. Text "1" for Pat and "2" for Jack. Awaiting the winner is the one and only Obie, who has his "Beach Boys" look on. It seems that every summer, right around the first day of it, in fact, the sun makes his hair a very light shade of blonde. Only his hairdresser knows for sure!

On a recent Saturday evening at Binlids, looking dapper as only he could after a day of drinking and fishing, Tigger brought a date into the bar. Okay, it was a flounder that he caught that day. What a "Tigger story" that poor flounder will have to tell in Fish Heaven. Anyway, the fish is under his arm as he walks in and introduces "Frederica Flounder" as his date. After a few more drinks he proceeds to take her home. When he gets home he attempts to filet the fish with a butter knife. It seems that Mrs. Kiger being a responsible adult had hid all of the sharp knives away from Tigger's reach.

Our Past President Tom Healey has moved to Ivyland and has this report to file: while out looking for a bike shop to buy his and hers bikes for him and the former First Lady, they passed a bike shop in Horsham called "Guy's Bicycles." Thomas wanted to stop there to peruse the inventory when the Mrs. stated that they couldn't buy them there. Tom being a former high-ranking police official using his best interrogation skills asked why and she stated that "they only sold Guy's bikes." Do you really think that I can make this stuff up?

During a recent Irish Night at the Camden River Sharks game, we were sitting behind the home team's dugout when a foul ball headed in our direction. It hit the concrete, bounced off A/C Chris' little finger and then bounced off of Sally's chest, leaving a welt there from the laces of the ball. Chris being the gentleman that he is, picked the ball up and accepted the crowd's accolades, while shaking his little finger. It is a good thing when you have your chest protector with you, but not a good idea if your wife is wearing it!

Sunday, July 10, is the semifinals of the Hibernian softball league. We are still alive thanks to the owner of the team, Billy Gibbons, who during a midseason slump sat down the "brain" trust of the team, Obie and Timmy Murphy, and explained to them how things were done when he played with Babe Ruth.

The game on the 10th is at 1:30 p.m. vs. Div. 6A at Mitchell Playground, near Frankford and Morrell, a 9 inning game for the right to go to the Championship game. If you are around, stop by and be entertained by a great group of 87ers and cheer them on to victory.

That's All Folks, Tug

A REPUBLICAN LEGEND

Borrowed from http://www.encyclopedia.com/topic/Sean_MacBride.aspx

Sean MacBride

Sean MacBride (1904-1988), who began his career with forerunners of the Irish Republican Army, later earned fame as a diplomat who worked 70 years for peace. His efforts focused on working toward a united Ireland, nuclear disarmament, and human rights.

Sean MacBride was born in Paris to Irish exile parents on January 26, 1904. His father was Major John MacBride, who fought against the British in South Africa's Boer War of 1899-1902, struggling to free the country from British colonialism. MacBride grew up among his parents' intellectual friends until returning to Ireland in 1916, shortly after his father was executed by the British. Both were leaders of the 1916 Easter Uprising in Dublin, a week-long battle sparked on Easter Monday, in which Irish rebels hoped to defeat British troops to establish home rule for Ireland.

MacBride's mother was Maud Gonne, the daughter of a British army colonel. Gonne was a "beautiful Irish actress and revolutionary" wrote William G. Blair in the New York Times. "She was called the Joan of Arc of Ireland and was celebrated in the poetry of William Butler Yeats, who at one time was in love with her." Like her husband and later her son, Gonne fought for Irish nationalism, spending time in jail for her activities on behalf of Irish independence.

Shortly after returning to Ireland, MacBride began to follow in his parents' revolutionary footsteps. He lied about his age in order to join the Irish Volunteers, an underground army fighting to drive British colonizers out of the country. In 1918, at the age of 13, MacBride was arrested by the British. Before the end of his career with the Volunteers, and later the Irish Republican Army, he would be sent to prison twice again, in 1922 and 1930.

Ireland has been a colony of Britain since being conquered in the 1600s. The Government of Ireland Act, passed in 1920, turned Ireland into two states, Northern Ireland and Southern Ireland. Southern Ireland, largely populated by Catholics, became a self-governing country but Northern Ireland remained a British colony. Many Irish citizens wanted to reunite the entire country and become independent from Britain, although some Irish citizens, especially Northern Ireland Protestants, prefer alliance with Britain.

Despite arrests and imprisonment, MacBride stayed with the IRA, and at 24 years of age became its chief of staff. He also worked as a journalist and studied law at the National University in Dublin. He was admitted to the Irish bar in 1937, at which point he left the IRA. Even though he denounced the group's increasingly violent tactics, he continued to defend IRA members in order to show the world how horrible and harsh Irish jails were. He became a successful trial lawyer in Dublin, becoming a senior counsel in only seven years.

Stepped into Politics

From his vantage point as a lawyer, MacBride saw opportunities to further the notion of national independence from Britain by becoming a politician. He formed a radical nationalist party, called the Republican Party, or Clann na Poblachta, and challenged the party of Prime Minister Eamon de Valera, which was called Fianna Fail. Together with several other opposition parties, MacBride's Republican Party ousted Fianna Fail. He served in parliament from 1947 to 1958, and held an appointment to the Foreign Ministry from 1948 to 1951. The Republican Party itself faded by 1965.

As part of the Marshall Plan, a U.S.-sponsored effort to help rebuild Europe after the destruction of World War II, MacBride served as vice president of the Organization for European Economic Cooperation, which later evolved into the European Economic Community. At the same time, he was tapped in 1950 as the president of the Council of Foreign Ministers of the Council of Europe.

Path to Peace

MacBride's interests evolved to embrace the notion of peace in other countries and worldwide. He became assistant secretary general to the United Nations, and served as the United Nations commissioner for Namibia from 1973 to 1976. Experienced because of his work in Ireland, MacBride worked to help Namibia become free. As stated in Sechaba, at MacBride's funeral, President Tambo of the African National Congress called him "a great beacon, guiding and assisting oppressed people to the path of national liberation and self-determination." Tambo said, "Sean MacBride will also be remembered for the concrete leadership he provided to the liberation movements and peoples of Namibia and South Africa, driven by personal and political insight, arising out of the cause of national freedom in Ireland. We recall our debt to him in the brilliant way in which he focused the attention of the world on the grim process of colonialism and exploitation in Africa in particular. Our debt to him can never be repaid."

MacBride worked as president of the International Peace Bureau in Geneva, Switzerland from 1972 to 1985. The IPB works to attain worldwide nuclear disarmament. After MacBride died, the group established the Sean MacBride Peace Prize, to honor others who have "done outstanding work for peace, disarmament or human rights." Recipients have included The Committee of Soldiers' Mothers of Russia, a group opposed to the civil war in Chechnya; Selim Beslagic, a proponent of a multi-ethnic solution to the Bosnian crisis; and a British group that disarmed an aircraft going to Indonesia.

In 1961, MacBride helped found Amnesty International, a worldwide human rights monitoring organization. He served as the group's chairman until 1975. He was also secretary general of the International Commission of Jurists, another human rights group, from 1963 until 1970, and a member until he died.

MacBride's tireless work for human rights were recognized in 1974 when he was awarded the Nobel Peace Prize with Prime Minister Eisaku Sato of Japan. In 1977, MacBride became one of the few Westerners to win the International Lenin Prize for Peace Among Nations for his work in Namibia. He was only the second person to win both.

Tireless Fighter for Justice

Still going strong at the age of 80, MacBride in 1984 helped draft and sponsor a code of behavior known as the MacBride Principles, aimed at forcing American companies who work in Northern Ireland to hire Roman Catholics and Protestants in equal numbers. The U.S. publication National Catholic Reporter noted that Catholics make up "about 42 percent of Northern Ireland's population but suffer unemployment at twice the rate of Protestants, according to the Washington-based Irish National Caucus."

The MacBride Principles were an effort to make American companies take responsibility for the employment practices of its factories in Northern Ireland. American companies such as American Brands, Du Pont, General Motors and Ford employ huge numbers of people in Northern Ireland. Companies that signed onto the principles would agree to make "every reasonable lawful effort to increase the representation of underrepresented religious groups at all levels of its operations in Northern Ireland," reported Steve Lohr of the New York Times. Tacked onto a budget bill, the MacBride Principles became part of U.S. policy when they were signed by President Bill Clinton on October 21, 1998. Clinton's budget also included $19.6 million in aid to the International Fund for Ireland.

MacBride died from pneumonia at the age of 83, January 15, 1988, at his home in Dublin, Ireland. His wife of 50 years, Catalina Bulfin, had died in 1976. MacBride is survived by his two children, Tiernan and Anna. •
